AN ASSAULT ON WOMAN'S "SITUATION"

Certain prophets have taught that women have no souls and some philosophers have denied them the same reasoning power as men. As a sorry consolation, the scientists have said that her power of perception is really due to intuition, an element largely lacking in man, but highly developed in the lower animals. True, the French savant, Henri Bergson, is now engaged in a world-wide controversy to establish his theory that all mankind is governed by both reason and intuition. Before his advent it was generally accepted that woman and intuition constituted the complement of man and reason.

It now appears that man, under the cloak of science, strives even to deprive her of this fifth sense, as it were. Smith Ely Jelliffe, M. D., asserts that much of woman's so-called intuition is in reality due to muscle reading, of which he has made a study. Women, he says, are on the lookout for certain forms of muscular reaction and can thus guess what is going on in the minds of others. Their constant contact, too, with small children, who characteristically show what they are thinking about through their muscles of expression, is a school of experience with them. The doctor's argument, speaking in a haphazard way, does not seem to bear analysis. If it proves anything, it is that woman's reason prompts her to watch for and interpret muscular actions. Accepting the soundness of his theory means the complete annihilation of the advocates of the intuitive explanation of feminine powers. Both views are passed to the psychologists without prejudice, but with the feeling that the recent statement to the effect that the only

RATIONAL LOVE

"The rational rather than the romantic view of marriage is the one we find in favor with the young people of the twentieth century," said Dr. H. Lucas Wentworth, the well-known gynecologist, in an address in Cleveland.

"The rational view will make for the happiest marriages. And this rational view is beautifully illustrated in two questions—a little dialogue—running thus:

"Will you always love me?" "Chicago Record-Herald.
